Life on the Balcony

3 Great Ways to Increase the Amount of Vegetables You Can Grow on a Balcony

Hang Grow Bags on the Outside of Your Railing

Park Seed sells these grow bags that hang off the ground and have 10 holes in the front where you can plant all sorts of edibles. Other manufacturers make something similar, but theirs is the best price I've found. Hang these bags six inches apart on the outside of your balcony railings. You can plant the bags with strawberries, leaf lettuces, herbs, and edible flowers (like nasturtium). You can also experiment with hanging bags/buckets meant to grow vegetables upside down alongside the grow bags.

Use Plant Stands to Grow Two Plants in One Footprint

If you raise your taller plants off the ground and place them on benches or plant stands, then you've freed up the space beneath them for smaller vegetables, herbs, salad greens, and edible flowers.

Start Seeds Indoors All Season Long

Many people start seeds indoors at the beginning of the growing season to get a head start while the weather is still too cold outside to grow plants outside. But don't stop there. Succession planting allows you to grow more plants in the same space by immediately planting a second crop when the first crop is finished. You can have your second crop waiting in the wings by starting those seeds indoors.

MAINTENANCE TIPS

Energy Saving Tips for Apartments

Even if you live in an apartment these Energy Saving Tips can help lower your electric bill and save money.

Unplug Appliances That Are Not Being Used. Even when they are turned off, appliances still use energy while they are plugged in. Unplugging your appliances isn't going to save a ton on your energy bill but it's easy, it's free and every little bit helps!

Turn Off Appliances When No One is Using Them. This is one of those Energy Saving Tips we all know about but is sometimes hard to get the kids (or sometimes even the husband... or wife) to remember. If the television is on and no one is watching it, it's just wasting energy and money.

Adjust Thermostats Appropriately. Overheating and overcooling your home will cost you. Keep the thermostat set at a comfortable temperature without going overboard and turn off your heater and air conditioner when no one is home. In extreme climates where it is not possible to turn them off completely, you can certainly adjust them so they use less energy.

Use Energy Saving Air Dry on the Dishwasher. The dishes will still dry nicely without the heat and you will save energy. Emergency After-Hours Telephone Number
